Company/Organization Description (and mission):

The Mastheads is a public arts and humanities project in Pittsfield, Massachusetts. It is at once an urban architectural experiment, a literary research initiative, a writers' residency, and an educational program.

We seek to connect residents to the literary history of the region, create a forum for thinking about place, and support the production of new creative work.

We envision a Pittsfield where all residents can engage in the reimagining of the city's unique, dynamic culture through the fields of literature, architecture, and design.
